

Final Concept Note

Beyond 2020:-Towards a Transformative Women, Peace and Security Agenda & Launch of new WPS Focal Points Network Website

Women, Peace and Security Focal Points Network (WPS FPN)

Co-hosted by Uruguay and Canada

Thursday July 15, 2021

08:30 -11:30 EDT/New York

Virtual, hosted on Zoom by WPS FPN UN Women Secretariat

Simultaneous Interpretation in English, French, Spanish and American Sign Language (ASL)

Overview

The Women, Peace and Security (WPS) agenda was launched with the adoption of UN Security Council Resolution 1325 in 2000, and grounded in the belief that people are impacted differently by conflict and have a right to influence decisions that affect their lives and well-being – including decisions on peace and security. The WPS agenda also recognizes that the inclusion of those most affected in decision-making produces better outcomes overall. Women are dramatically under-represented in decision-making processes on peace and security, and marginalized women even more so. The WPS agenda seeks to ensure their active and meaningful participation in all conflict-prevention and conflict-resolution mechanisms and institutions and to mainstream a gender perspective into all peace and security activities and strategies.

Twenty years on, we need a WPS agenda that is fit for purpose to address crises, whether COVID 19, climate change, racialized violence and other peace and security challenges. As we move beyond the 20th anniversary of UNSCR 1325, its time to take concrete action and put the WPS agenda's vision of transformative gender-equal and inclusive peace and security into practice. In this past year, the COVID 19 pandemic has amplified existing peace and security issues and all nations are facing serious challenges on many fronts. In all communities, countries and regions, we see once again that women are not only severely impacted by this crisis; they are on the frontlines of our pandemic response and recovery efforts. In crisis there is also opportunity for positive action and transformation. As nations plan and prepare for a more resilient and peaceful future, we must work harder to ensure women are always at the centre of decision-making.

This meeting will explore the following themes in two main plenary sessions in an interactive format and using collaborative tools. The opening panel, “Towards a Transformative WPS Agenda” will explore why we need a more inclusive WPS agenda that is applied to the full continuum of sexual and gender-based violence, insecurity and conflict. The second interactive plenary session, “Building Trust, Building Peace”, will highlight the personal experiences and diverse perspectives of women peacebuilders who work as trusted actors and leaders in their communities, countries and regions on violence and conflict prevention, resolution and recovery.

In a third session, the co-chairs are proud to present a new innovation to assist WPS Focal Points in their work -- a WPS Focal Points Network website that will provide global “knowledge platform” on WPS. The new platform will include Network specific content, as well as links to sites and databases that can assist WPS Focal Points and other stakeholders in researching, designing, implementing, and evaluating WPS action plans and strategies. The discussion feature of the platform will allow Focal Points and other stakeholders to share best practices and lessons learned on issues related to the WPS agenda. There will also be a dedicated space for WPS Focal Points to connect with each other on WPS, including on their action plans and strategies.

Goals and Guidelines for the Meeting

Through interactive plenary discussions with WPS specialists and experts, this event will support the WPS Focal Points to:

- Enhance knowledge on the applicability of the WPS agenda in non-armed conflict settings, and on the importance of inclusion in peace and security decision-making;
- Develop clear recommendations highlighting concrete actions for Focal Points to advance implementation of these at the national, regional and international level; and
- Identify ways the Network can collectively advance implementation of a transformative WPS agenda.
